The Columbus Strikers Effectually Blockade Business.

INDULGING IN RIOTOUS ACTS.

Wild Excitement and Police Unable to Prevent Disorder.

ALL THE NEWS FROM NEARBY TOWNS

Columnus, June 9 .- The strike on the Consolidated Street Railway, which has been in progress seven days, culminated today in scenes which bordered on a riot. The company has been unable to run cars since the strike was inaugurated. Public sympathy has been with the employes, and the delays on the part of the company have given an opportunity for all labor organizations to extend aid and cheer. To-day the feeling was ripe for a riot.

The principal trouble the company has had was the failure to get police protection to start the cars. The Mayor has shown a willingness, but the police, in sympathy with the strikers, construed instructions that they should not inconstrued instructions that they should not interfore unless there was an assault committed.
The presence of the police at the barns has been no barrier to the strikers in controlling the cars and intimidating the new men. The Mayor last night issued a proclamation against congregating on the street, with assurances that the law would be enforced, which seems to have had the effect of bringing the people out in larger numbers. The employes at many of the leading manufactories left their places of business to aid the strikers, and the lines over which the cars were scheduled to run were lined from end to end.

RIOTOUS PROCEEDINGS.

Shortly before noon, between 30 and 40 new men were conveyed to one of the barns in the east side where a crowd of several hundred had congregated. There was determination on the faces of the strikers. Thirty police with the Chief at their bend were also on the ground. Chief at their bead were also on the ground. The first car out was filled with police, strikers and their friends. The distance from the stable to the principal thoroughfare down town is a little over three miles. The entire distance was lined with people, and in many places large crowds had gathered. The team was driven rapidly, and as it passed strikers boarded the same until it was crowded and then began to same until it was crowded and then began to climb on top.

The car was rocked back and forth, almost tipping it on its side, but the police did not fear getting hurt. A favorite way to overload was to drive a spring wagon alongside the car and from this the strikers and others would jump on. After going nearly two miles the strikers succeeded in derailing the cat, and ran it to the side of the street. All along the route the strikers were greeted with cheers, and women and children followed aiding in the work. The driver of the car escaped through alleys, and the conductor kicked a woman and begged to be arrested by the police that he might escape e conductor kicked a woman and degree to e arrested by the police that he might escape jury. The city had poured its masses into e streets by this time, and all space was owded for squares in every direction. THE SECOND CAR DERAILED.

It is estimated over 10,000 people were crowding to the point of excitement. The second car out met with no better fate, and was rushed through the multitude with similar scenes enacted. The ear could not be seen for strikers, who covered it. The police had no control, and did not pretend to give protection to the new employes. The car was finally thrown bodily across High street, the windows knocked out, and the driver and conductor escaped with the mob after them. The driver was afterward escorted to the depot and placed aboard a train. Mayor Bruck witnessed the scene, and ordered that no more cars be run out during the day. Order was soon restored, and the strikers felt they had won another victory. The company is discouraged, and attribute their inability to run the cars to the lack of police protection.

Consultation was had with Adjutant General Hawkins in regard to calling out the militia, but that official stated there was no such demand necessary. seen for strikers, who covered it. The police but that official stated there was no such de-mand necessary.

The City Council to-night adopted several resolutions, one of which was for the arbitra-tion of the difficulties, another appointing a committee to wait upon the company and learn if they will pursue this course, and finally, if the company refuse to arbitrate, instructing the City Solicitor to institute proceedings for a revocation of the charter. The company con-templates another effort to start the cars to-mocrow morning. They say they will neither arbitrate or advance wages.

THE ORGANIZATION IS LEGAL.

The Action of the Original Incorporator Sustains Them at Present.

PEPECIAL TELEGRAM TO THE DISPATCE. HARRISBURG, June 9 .- The Dauphin County Court to-day decided not to order the closing of the business of the United Brethren Mutual Aid Society or the removal of its officers, as suggested by the Attorney General on the application of members who claimed that they were not permitted to participate in the elec-tion of officers of the association. The Court calls attention to the fact that since the proceedings were started against the defendant at two elections officers were levally chosen, and "The action of the original incorporators in adopting by-laws giving to themselves, tors in adopting by-haws giving to themselves, as officers of the society, the right to fill all vacancies in the board of direction and other offices, and to fix their own salaries, was certainly not warranted by the charter of the society or by law. But this action, as we have already stated, has been rescinded, and the organization, as now perfected, appears to be entirely leval.

A WINGED MONSTER.

Two Arizona Ranchers Kill an Unknow

Species of Bird. Tucson, ARIZ., June 9.-A winged monster resembling a huge alligator, with an extremely elongated tail and an immense pair of wings, was found on the desert between the Whetstone and Huachuca Mountains, by two ranchers who were returning home from the Huachucas. After the first shock of amazement had passed the two men, who were on horseback and armed with Winchester rifles, regained sufficient cour-age to pursue the monster, and, after an ex-citing chase of several miles, succeeded in geting near enough to open fire with their rifles and wounding it. The creature then turned on the men, but owing to its exhausted condition they were able to keep out of its way, and after a few well-directed shots the monster partly rolled over and remained motionless. The men cautiously approached, their horses snorting cautiously appreached, their horses snorting with terror, and found that the creature was dead. They then proceeded to make an examination, and found that it measured about $2 feet in length, and the greatest diameter was about 50 inches.

The monster had only two feet, these being situated a short distance in front of where the wings were joined to the body. The head, as near as they could judge, was about $ feet long, the jaws being thickly set with strong, sharp teeth. Its eyes were as large as a digner plate, and protruded about half way from the head. They had some difficulty in measuring the wings as they were partly folded under the body, but they finally got one straightened out sufficiently to get a measurement of 78 feet, making the total measurement from tin to tip about 180 feet. The wings were composed of a thick and nearly transparent membrane, and were devoid of feathers or half, as was the entire body. The skin of the body was comparatively smooth and easily penetrated by a builet. The men cut off a small portion of the tip of one wing and took it home with them. tip of one wing and took it home with them.
